24th October, 2021

Thirtieth Sunday in Ordinary Time.

Hi all,
I hope everyone is doing well. Thankfully the restrictions that we have become used to are now beginning to lift and churches and religious services are back at full capacity with the usual restrictions such as hand sanitisation and mask wearing with social distancing where possible. With this in mind I will drop the 7.30 pm evening Mass in Johnstown from Saturday, 6th November as planned and I will continue with the 9 am in Cooldorrihy on the Sunday morning for the time being.

Earlier this week, we laid to rest the late Maisie Thompson, our Sacristan in Johnstown church who gave sterling service to the church over many years. She kept everything in tip-top shape and did an excellent job in her many duties as sacristan. She was obliging and caring, gentle and very thorough in her work. She was there for all Masses and ceremonies though the years. She opened for Baptisms, Funerals, Weddings and many other activities that went on. She kept the place polished and clean as well as taking care of the altar linens and vestments. She also reminded me and all those that went before me of supplies needed such as candles, Altar wine, breads, incense and charcoal. She often, sometimes at short notice, opened the church for various people who needed access to the church for minor repairs, fire extinguishers and fire alarms. The above is a very small list of the many duties she performed in her time in Johnstown church.

I was very glad that when Maisie was no longer able to work due to illness that her husband Jimmy assisted by their family continued her work to this day. I am eternally grateful to them for their work and assistance.

May Maisie now rest in peace after her many years of kindness to our community and her family.

Regards and blessings.

Pat.
